

Agreement for Admission to the Doctor of Education Program (Ed.D.) in Curriculum and Instruction, Specializing in Educational Technology

1. Scope and Objectives

This agreement applies to doctoral applicants seeking admission to the Ed.D. program specializing in Educational Technology. The objectives of this agreement are to ensure understanding of admissions policies and program structure.

2. This agreement is entered into between the Educational Technology faculty of the School of Teaching and Learning and

_____ (Doctoral applicant)

3. Term

This agreement pertains to the application for admission to the Ed.D. program scheduled to commence in the Fall semester, 2010.

4. Admission Policies

The applicant understands that:

- This program accepts applications for programs starting in the Fall semester after the applicants completes all prerequisite requirements, including a Master's degree in Education, Educational Technology or a related field.
- A phone interview with program faculty may be required in the application process
- Admitted students will begin their program provided that the necessary number of students apply and are admitted for the cohort.

5. Program Structure

The applicant understands that:

- This program is scheduled as a cohort program with a specified sequence of courses. Applicants who are unable to continue with their initial cohort must join a later cohort.
- Regular and meaningful contribution to the program's electronic community is expected.
- All cohort members meet face-to-face on the UF campus annually. The Fall 2010 cohort will meet June 18th & 19th at the University of Florida's College of Education. This meeting is the only campus-based requirement for Summer 2010.
- Future campus-based experiences will also occur in the summers and will be one week in length. The campus-based experience is an annual requirement for the three years of the program. Applicants who are unable to attend a campus-based session must join a later cohort.
- Additional visits may be necessary to complete doctoral requirements. The student and doctoral committee will collaboratively determine this later in the program.
- Applicants are responsible for travel expenses, lodging and meals during the campus-based experiences.
